TOKYO, Jan. 30.—(INS)—Eleven warships, paced by the giant battle-wagon Missouri, and waves of carrier planes blasted Kansong on North Korea's east coast today as

United Nations minesweepers cleared the waters off that port.

The shattering attack, resembling previous pre-invasion bombardments, struck at the rear flank of growing Chinese and North Korean forces battling UN troops along the whole front from the area below Seoul eastward across the peninsula.

On the west coastal flank, other

UN naval forces, spearheaded by the American heavy cruiser St. Paul and the destroyer Hank, shelled

Seoul's port of Inchon and its environs Monday for a third straight day.

The sea and air blows were unleashed amid indications of an imminent Communist offensive in South Korea's central and eastern sectors and after UN air men spotted

1,200 Red vehicles moving south on all of North Korea's main roads.

STILL CRYING "WOLF"

There is an old story about the lad tending sheep who cried "wolf" when his flock was not in danger, merely to create a bit of excitement. He did this so often, the story goes, that when the wolves did show up his cries failed to bring help.

A similar situation in Washington has to do with the administration's aid to the nations of Western Europe. At regular intervals the charge is made that American aid funds are being channeled to Russian communists with only brief stop-overs in the nations of Western Europe.

The latest challenge comes from Sen. Herbert O'Connor of Maryland, who declares a Senate committee of which he is head is deeply concerned over the export and trans-shipment of strategic goods to nations friendly to Russia and potential enemies of the United States. In some cases, Senator O'Connor charges, American aid money has been used to build factories which are supplying munitions of war to Russia.

These charges have been made so often there can be no doubt of the facts. Yet nothing seems to have been done about it, and the cry of "wolf" continues.

SMITH GOES TO MOSCOW

"Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," starring Gary Cooper and Jimmy Stewart, respectively, were popular movies of the thirties, full of what Hollywood terms "social significance." But what Russia has been doing to them lately shouldn't even happen to a "social significance" cinema opus.

The State Department has just protested to the Soviet Foreign Office against the showing of the two films in Russia. The Russians, it seems, have neglected the formality of asking Hollywood for permission to show them, and have not offered to pay for the privilege. "The films it is showing were 'liberated' as war booty in Germany. But what burns the State Department up is that Russian cutting-rooms, by adroit editing, have turned both pictures into anti-American propaganda.

Mr. Deeds was a country boy who unexpectedly acquired a million dollars, and promptly set out to help depression-hit farmers by helping them to help themselves through industry and initiative. In the story, some crooks try to have him declared insane and grab off the million. But justice triumphs and Gary Cooper Deeds gets the girl. In the Soviet version, the crooks win out over Mr. Deeds. They are represented as typical of "American ruling circle."

Mr. Smith, in the other film, is elected to Congress and fights greed, waste and corruption. But in the Russian editing his enemies win out. This is a fate worse than the death that surely awaits any Russian Deeds or Smith.

Free speech, says the Supreme Court, does not include the right to start a riot. Baseball fans, irked by the umpire, will continue to be a privileged class.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1950 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—A spot check by a committee of the U. S. Senate discloses that 32 per cent of the United Nations representatives from foreign countries are skilled in espionage and that of the total, 29 per cent are here and now spying on the U. S.

When these facts were recorded herein a passel of surprised readers wanted to know, "How come?" On the surface this is an easy one to answer, but don't expect to apply ordinary rules of common sense when you hear it. It's the law. When we signed the U. N. Charter our State Department handed over to the global planners most of the country's security keys. Right now an average of eight Communist espionage agents a month filter through U. S. borders into the United Nations set-up, all granted visas by the State Department.

State Department aides when questioned passed the buck on up to the Secretary of State, but in the process I had a chance to learn more about some of the characters who sound off at U. N. headquarters on world affairs.

Herve J. L'Heureux, then chief of the visa division of the Department of State, answered some questions on the situation put to him by Richard Arens, staff director of the Senate Special Subcommittee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Arens asked the following "for instance."

"If you received a report on an individual to the effect that he was director of the activities of the espionage of a foreign government and was being sent to this country to exercise surveillance over certain of the Communists in the U. S., would you turn down his visa application?"

"Yes, sir," L'Heureux replied. "If you received a report to the effect that a particular individual was affiliated with a branch of the intelligence service of an Iron Curtain country and was being sent to this country to promulgate the work of that intelligence service, would you turn down that file?"

Again, "Yes, sir."

"Would you turn down the application of a person who applies and for whom information was available to the Department that that individual had been a Communist organizer who had participated in a Communist revolution and had planted a bomb in a cathedral in a foreign country which blew up and killed 500 people? Would you admit that person?"

"I personally would not; no," the State Department expert said. "Mr. L'Heureux, would you turn down the application or recommend unfavorable action on the application of an individual who was reported to be the leader of a terrorist band in a foreign government and concerning whom you would receive information that he had shot more people than you and I could bury in a fortnight?"

"I would," L'Heureux replied, "but the responsible officials of the Department have to consider the different stages of negotiations and different matters pending with that country, reciprocity, exchange of personnel and so forth. So that I, as an individual, or as the chief of the visa division, who is charged with the administration of the law, or as just a plain, good American citizen, should say, this person should not come in. When you tie that adverse information in with the conduct of foreign relations, there may be another decision made."

Staff Director Arens got tired of playing cat and mouse at this point. He laid it on the line. None of the cases he mentioned (and there are many more) is hypothetical. All were individuals who were permitted entry into the U. S. for either U. N. or foreign embassy jobs.

The character who bombed the cathedral, a woman, believe it or not, not only served in an important U. N. position but toured the U. S. lecturing foreign-born groups on the finer points of the civilization available behind the Iron Curtain. She is Tsolia Dragoicheva, one of the top Communists in Bulgaria.

She served a term in prison for her terrorist bombing but was freed when the Communists captured her country with her help. When she got to the U. S., with her reputation trailing behind her, she was treated as a decent representative from a foreign country. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt even had her as a guest at one of the former first lady's famous afternoon teas.

These are the kind of Communist goons who are handled with kid gloves by the State Department and by U. S. representatives at the U. N., all apparently, to keep Russia happy and the U. S. alive. It hardly seems worth it.

How to Look Your Best

Take a tip from the movie stars when it comes to dress and make-up. For instance, Joan Fontaine says that for daytime wear a tailored suit is always proper.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SMART women who want to make themselves attractive to the eye are able to do so. It isn't so much a matter of money flinging as it is of using the head for the purpose for which it was intended. If a woman has good taste, an eye for beauty, and appreciation of beautiful colors, she will march with pulchritude banners flying.

There are others who seem to regard it as a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, never to be obtained, so why bother? It is a sure thing that they will not be able to combat defects or even to hang onto the good points nature has given them. They won't take the trouble to carry themselves splendidly. Shopping for clothes is a bore; they take any garment that happens to fit. They refuse to learn how to use make-up cleverly. They are no help to the pleasure of the public eye.

Certain movie stars are proof of what can be done to glamorize a woman. Gloria Swanson is handsomer now than she has ever been, and she is an old timer of the screen. Greta Garbo wouldn't have claimed a beauty prize when she first arrived in this country. Taken in hand by Hollywood dress and make-up artists she bloomed forth as a lovely person.

Joan Crawford, born with a large mouth and heavy lips did not endeavor to camouflage them. Instead she accentuated the width of her lips, started a craze that went through the country like wildfire.

It has been said that when Norma Shearer started on her career she was not possessed of fine figure lines because her carriage was faulty. By practicing correct posture, by following health rules, by taking proper exercise, she has made herself truly beautiful.

What About Radioactive Clouds?

IN AIR BURSTS RADIOACTIVE DUSTS ARE SPREAD SO WIDELY THAT THEY ARE UNLIKELY TO HARM PEOPLE

IN SPITE of the huge quantities of lingering radioactivity loosed by atomic explosions, people fortunately are not very likely to be exposed to dangerous amounts of it in most atomic raids.

AIR BURSTS WILL NOT CREATE "AREAS OF DOOM"

Since high-level bursts do the greatest damage, that is the kind we can expect most often. When atomic weapons are exploded in mid-air, the violent, upward surge of super-hot gases and air quickly sweeps practically all the radioactive ashes and unexploded bits of bomb fuel high into the sky. Most of them are carried harmlessly off in the drifting bomb clouds. High-level explosions definitely will not create "areas of doom," where no man dares enter and no plant can grow. In fact, they will leave very little radioactivity on the ground, even near the point of explosion. Firefighters and rescue teams can move promptly toward the center of destruction with little danger of facing harmful radiation.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT HIGH-LEVEL RADIOACTIVE CLOUDS

And regardless of all you may have heard or read concerning the dangers of radioactive clouds, after the first minute and a half there is actually little or nothing to fear from those produced by high-level bursts. While most of the radioactive materials swept up into the sky eventually fall back to earth, they are so widely and so thinly spread that they are very unlikely to offer any real dangers to humans.

IT WOULD TAKE MANY THOUSANDS OF A-BOMBS TO PRODUCE DANGEROUS GROUND CONTAMINATION

Thousands of bombs would have to be set off in the air before serious ground contamination would be found over really large areas. There was no ground-level pollution of any importance following either of the two Japanese atomic bombings.

NONE OF THE JAPANESE AT HIROSHIMA OR NAGASAKI WERE HARMED BY LINGERING RADIOACTIVITY

It was said earlier that 15 per cent of the Japanese A-bomb deaths Reprinted from the official U. S. government report.

Round and Round We Go

mander-in-chief this outrage took place, has never given any accounting to the American people for the event. Congress has discussed the matter more than once, but never asked any really embarrassing questions.

Obviously, the destruction of our arms at that time was the third of three supremely important . . . acts which unfenced Russia and turned her loose on a cringing world . . . the first being the decision in Washington to invade Europe across the British Channel instead of through the Balkans as Churchill wished; and the second being the decision, also in Washington, to not merely defeat Germany and Japan, but to crush them into the dust, eliminate them as curbs on Russia.

Whether Red Russian agents, infiltrated into high places at Washington, were the ones who dictated the throwing away of Uncle Sam's protections, or whether this was doped up by some of the numerous blunderheads who have been in charge of so much of our government, is a matter on which the American public is wholly uninformed. But again, what is infinitely more important, IT DOESN'T SEEM TO CARE!

No sooner were the weapons gone than President Truman began asking funds to build up a new pool of war weapons and equipment. In the last five years, it is estimated that at least forty-eight billions of dollars was appropriated for this purpose—appropriated and spent, but spent, we now know, for some purpose other than putting our army and navy back on a normal footing. The Korean incident revealed that we are almost wholly defenseless. We are now in the midst of a frantic scramble to get what we had five years ago and threw away, and what we have paid for about twice over since then, without acquiring.

Congress has attempted, in a hesitant sort of fashion, to ask what became of all the money provided to re-arm Uncle Sam, and now all spent out for something else. It hasn't got anywhere. The public doesn't have any inkling of the answer. But once again, what is infinitely more important, IT DOESN'T SEEM TO CARE!

During the period when the American people thought we had an Army and Navy on hand, adequately equipped, to protect us, our Washington leaders sold the country on a scheme of buying friendship abroad. Under the various programs — the Greek program, the Marshall Plan, the British "loans," the ECA, etc., etc.—an amount of money which cannot be exactly estimated, but which appears to total somewhere between thirty and forty billions of dollars, has been poured out lavishly.

But when the Korean incident developed, we found we had bought neither friendship nor support in return for these extravagant gifts. No nation has been willing to provide more than a token number of troops to help us fight in Korea — perhaps one foreign boy to each forty of our own. They will not even back us up in the United Nations sessions by saying that it was China's fault, not ours, the present situation arose.

Neither President Truman and not any of his subordinates, not even General Marshall for whom the biggest of the international giveaways was named, has come forward with an accounting of stewardship in this extravagant program, so barren of results. Congress has raised some mild questions, but shows no intention of getting to the bottom. The American public is wholly in the dark—but once more, what is infinitely more important, IT DOESN'T SEEM TO CARE!

And today the same group of power-drunk public "servants" in Washington are seeking to embark on a new scheme of spending between seventy and a hundred and fifty billions of dollars for the war equipment we once had, threw away, paid for twice over since then.

And the general attitude seems to be that it is almost unpatriotic either to show any curiosity over what has happened in the past, or to express any doubts that those who failed so miserably in the past will succeed any better in the future!

Grand Opening For "Acme" is Tomorrow

Acme markets which have been operated here for many years will close. These are located at the corner of Bath and Otter streets, and on Farragut avenue. All employees of these markets are to be "absorbed" at the completely departmentalized, new market. In all there will be approximately 40 to 50 employees (including part-time workers). Edward Priestley will serve as manager of the new market. Mr. Priestley has been manager of the Farragut avenue store for many years. The meat department will be under management of Delbert Lynn; and the refrigerated produce department will be under management of Herbert McCollie.

The new structure, which measures 60x180 feet, has a space 60x135 feet devoted to the retail store space. The building is of brick construction, the enamel front having trim of stainless steel. The electrically-lighted tower bears in large letters the word "Acme." The parking lot will also be amply lighted at night. Eight-foot "slim-line" lights of the fluorescent type make the interior like day. The entire front of the building is of glass. The interior walls are of white "marlite" and floors of asphalt tile. In the basement there are accommodated the power plant, compressors for refrigerators, and oil burner. In the basement, too, is the boiler room.

The self-service display cases for vegetables and fruits are of white enamel and glass, and beneath these cases, which line the walls, are storage spaces for additional goods. All are refrigerated.

As "Mrs. Shopper" makes her way down the aisles, selecting from thousands of items, she will wheel one of scores of new chrome food carriages. Some have seating space for baby. And, with the baby of the house in mind, the Acme interests have provided at the new market a complete line of baby foods.

One outstanding feature of the new market will be the self-service meat department, where meat which has been pre-weighed and cellophane-wrapped, may be readily selected by the shopper. This line, under refrigeration, will be "most complete" it is stated.

The refrigerated produce will include not only vegetables and fruits, but juices, meats, fish, etc. "We will feature two brands of ice cream, Sylvan Seal and Seal Test," stated a spokesman for the firm today. This will be packaged goods.

A full line of cheese will be carried in the dairy department. To care for general stock for these items there is a 10x10 foot refrigerator in the stock room at the rear of the store. Close-by is the cheese-cutting table, where weighing and packaging of this product takes place.

Bottled beverages will be in variety and sizes of containers; and the Acme market will carry a full line of its own bakery products. A new department to be opened is that featuring cosmetics; and for those with a "sweet tooth" the candy shelves will have a larger and more varied assortment than hitherto at the local Acme.

In the stock-rooms are located bunkers for storage of fish, and counters for cleaning the same. Packing tables for both fish and poultry are provided. There are huge refrigerators for surplus frozen goods, and two large storage refrigerators for meat. Employees' lockers, and the modernized women's lounge are also in the rear, where are also located the delivery doors.

Nothing has been forgotten—not even water for the thirsty shopper. Thirst may be quenched at the modern fountain at the rear of the store.

11 Warships, Waves of 'Planes Blast Kansong

the east-central front, declared that "we are ready for it," adding: "We are determined to meet him (the enemy) and engage him until we either destroy him or he surrenders."

The general said his American, Dutch, French and South Korean troops "hold the best possible terrain and are distributed to resist anything the enemy throws at us." On the western front, meantime, Allied troops of the U. S. First and Ninth Corps scored new gains up to two and a half miles against bitter Red resistance in the sixth day of a crumpling drive toward Korea's enemy-held capital of Seoul.

The spectacular shelling, bombing, rocketing and strafing of the Kansong area began at dawn Tuesday when the historic battleship Missouri and ten other war vessels opened up with quaking salvos of gunfire.

A U. S. Navy announcement said the attack was carried out by a "powerful" task force and called it "one of the heaviest and most devastating bombardments of recent months."

A preliminary report, according to the official bulletin, indicated that "heavy damage" was inflicted on rail and highway bridges and the communications network in the Kansong area. Kansong is 30 air miles north of Parallel 38 and 73 miles southeast of Wonsan, a major North Korean port once occupied by UN troops.

During the first hour of the thunderous assault, the 45,000-ton "Big Mo" poured more than 1,000 rounds of 16-inch and five-inch shells into Kansong and its environs.

A U. S. Navy announcement in Tokyo late Tuesday said the cruiser Manchester and nine destroyers added their gunfire to the bombardment.

At the same time, the communiqué said, "heavily loaded Navy Force 77 were over the area throughout the morning, blasting pre-assigned targets."

The bulletin said the Manchester and the destroyers were "firing over the masts of minesweepers clearing the area."

The fire of these ships, the announcement continued, "added to the tremendous volume of gunfire" rained upon the Kansong area.

The Navy termed the attack a "neutralization bombardment." It said the task fleet approached the North Korean eastern port during the night, then opened fire from "all batteries" at 7 a. m. Tuesday (5 p. m. Monday EST), 16 minutes before the sun rose over a calm sea.

The day was described as "crystal clear" and carrier-borne Skyraiders made their first air strike over the area at 7.45 a. m.

Kansong straddles the rail-highway route that parallels Korea's east coast. It lies more than 100 air miles northeast of South Korea's Red-occupied capital of Seoul, and is 52 miles northwest of Kangnung on the South Korean east coast.

One mile south of Kangnung, reinforced Chinese Communist troops up to battalion strength counter-attacked a UN company, provoking a battle in which at least 200 Reds were killed.

On the vital front south and southeast of Seoul, U. S. Eighth Army forces scored gains up to two and a half miles at some points in the sixth day of the grinding UN advance toward the capital.

The push, described as "steady and consistent" in an Eighth Army Tuesday noon communiqué, was resumed at daybreak after enemy group up to battalion size had staged counter-attacks and infiltration thrusts during the night.

The Chinese invaders brought artillery into action on the Seoul front for the first time. Their counter-attacks were preceded by the customary Chinese blaring of bugles and blowing of whistles.

In the sectors above Suwon and Kumsang, 17 and 20 miles south and southeast of Seoul, the Reds struck during the night with heavy small arms and automatic weapons as well as artillery fire.

One Allied unit was forced to make a temporary pre-dawn withdrawal on the extreme west flank seven miles northwest of Suwon when a Chinese battalion attacked under cover of artillery, mortar and machine gun fire.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

SEA foods can lend a pleasant change of pace to weekend meals—especially if they are well prepared and a little out-of-the-ordinary. This week A & P's Service for Homemakers recommends just such a dish—tempting scalloped oysters with baked potatoes.

For a serving of four people, about two and one-half dozen, or one quart, of raw oysters are needed. Drain off the liquid and save.

Since the potatoes will take longer to cook than the oysters, they should be placed in the oven (set for 425°F.) about 15 or 20 minutes beforehand.

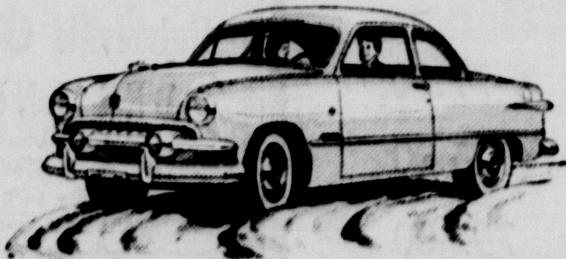

Now take five slices of golden brown toast and trim into pieces about one-half inch wide. Then, in a saucepan in which one-quarter cup of margarine has been melted, sauté the pieces of toast until they are well coated. In the bottom of a greased, shallow baking dish or casserole, arrange a layer of one-third of the toast pieces. Next, half the oysters can be arranged in a layer over the toast. These should be covered with a sauce prepared as follows:

In a measuring cup combine one-quarter cup of the oyster liquid, 4 tablespoons of light cream, 2 tablespoons of sherry, one teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a dash of cayenne, and salt and pepper to taste. Pour half of this sauce over the first layer of oysters. Now add a second layer of toast, and cover with the remaining oysters. Pour on the rest of the sauce, and sprinkle the mixture with the last of the toast pieces.

Bake for 30 minutes at 350°F. Serve with a mixed green salad of lettuce, chicory and tomatoes.

For dessert, serve a fresh apple pie topped off with a thick slice of your favorite cheese, and a steaming cup of coffee.

BUSINESS CENTER IS IN THE KITCHEN

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

More and more homemakers are planning pleasant working space in the kitchen for their household business. How often while you're working in the kitchen have you thought of things to jot down, groceries that are needed, or jobs to be done? With an "office" in the kitchen, you have a place to file bills, circulars, newspaper clippings, and recipes.

If your kitchen is small, a shelf with space enough for writing will serve the purpose. Equip it with a chair or stool that slides easily in under the shelf when not in use. Place a bulletin board and a good pin-up light on the wall above the shelf.

With a small table or desk you can have a more complete business center. Or extend the kitchen counter surface into a corner. Finish the cupboard above with shelves and pigeonholes to take care of supplies.

Good location for the business center is against an interior wall. Then you can place the telephone in a paneled section opening into both rooms, the kitchen and living room, dining room or hall.

A shallow drawer or tray with wooden or plastic dividers will help keep small writing supplies orderly.

Leaving Tot With "Sitter"

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

MANY a mother writes of the child under three or four who is never happy out of her sight. What a scene when this mother tries to leave this child with a baby sitter or in the nursery department of a Sunday school or at school when he later enters there!

Every mother should start early, even when the youngster is a mere infant, to have the father or another member of the family or another person seen often by the child for some time take care of him for brief periods, at first while the mother is present and later while she is absent. Always this procedure should be gradual, for a few minutes at first and for slowly-increasing periods later. As soon as the child is old enough to play with others of his age, this play can help him grow less dependent emotionally on his mother.

Common Problem

The most common problem arises when the parents begin the practice together of leaving the young child with a baby sitter. How difficult it may be for the child from a year to four or five years of age when he discovers suddenly that his parents are going out and leaving him with a person he saw for the first time only a few minutes previously.

Wiser parents, before their first time of leaving the little child with a baby sitter, employ her to come much earlier in the day, or to come for an afternoon or two while they are home, so the youngster may grow acquainted with her.

Strange Person

Imagine yourself, a little child, awaking to see a strange person (baby sitter) and to learn that the parents have gone away without telling you they were going. Such an experience by a child may have ill effects for an indefinite period, causing him to have fear that he might be left again and even to dread having his mother out of his sight. He also may have many frightful dreams for months and months. (My bulletin "Fears" may be had by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of this paper.) Discerning mothers, who plan to go out, always announce casually to the child the fact in due time, just as they also apprise this child beforehand of any other change in his program which might not prove pleasant to him.

But suppose that, in spite of all proper precautions, the youngster indicates before the parents are about to go away and leave him with a baby sitter, strong objections to their plans and cries violently as they go. The mother's impulse is to feel very much upset and to betray her feelings to the youngster. If, as she leave him, he cries piteously and clings to her, she may linger and even go back several times to caress him, and all the while he may grow more hysterical and she more upset.

Casual and Final

She could make it easier for the youngster and herself if she were to make her leaving casual and final, and not even look back. Though the youngster may cry violently as she goes, he may cease crying before she will have gone a block.

An occasional mother has been so constantly with the child even up to when he is past two or three that she can't have the heart to go out and leave him and to see and hear him cry after her. This mother might more easily gain the fortitude to leave him with a baby sitter if she were to practice gradually at being out of his sight right in the house; later to put on her hat and coat and walk around the block, leaving him with a person she knows, repeating this performance several successive times, each time staying away a bit longer. One mother told me she made eight of such trips during one forenoon and that on the seventh and eighth trips the youngster didn't cry at all as she left.

BOWLING

Auto Boys National League team (without Plavin) rolls highest team score ever rolled in Bristol bowling history. In last week's National League bowling the Auto Boys team captured the spotlight by rolling a single high game score of 1135. Every Auto Boys team member rolled better than 200 to accomplish this feat and to the knowledge of the bowling veterans this score of 1135 sets a new Bristol record.

"Andy" Moore would like it mentioned that the high score was rolled by the Auto Boys team without Leon Plavin, team member and sponsor. 600 series were rolled by Robert Green, Art Kramers, George Bowman, Bob Wardrop and Bill Wichser.

WARRIORS WILL MEET LANSDALE TO AVENGE DEFEAT

Bristol High will travel to Lansdale High tonight in an effort to avenge an early season defeat from the Bux-Mont League team. There will be a junior varsity game starting at 7:30 o'clock.

Coach Jerry Bloom's proteges lost a tough decision to Pennsbury last Friday, a defeat which practically eliminated the Warriors from the Lower Bucks title.

Bristol will be a busy outfit this week as on Thursday night it meets the St. Matthew's team of Conshohocken here, while on Friday night the Warriors go to Upper Moreland.

IMPROVED HEALTH IS RESULT OF RESEARCH

By Francis Vannoy

Home Economics Extension Rep. Great strides have been made in nutrition and health in recent years. Findings in research have resulted in an improved food supply and have helped to make the United States one of the best fed nations in the world.

Pellagra and rickets have been almost eliminated in this country by a simple improvement in diet. Better diets for pregnant women and nursing mothers have improved the health of children and mothers. Prevalence of goiter has been greatly decreased by adding iodine to salt. In communities where minute amounts of flourine are put in drinking water, tooth decay is being reduced.

New methods and procedures in processing and marketing have improved our food supply. Availability of green vegetables the year around is helping to reduce anemia. Frozen orange juice has increased the supply of ascorbic acid (vitamin C) on the market. Frozen and canned fruits and vegetables and more abundant fresh fruits have contributed to improved health.

Enrichment of flour and bread has helped to provide more of the B vitamins and iron. Dried milk is giving families on limited incomes the nutrients provided in whole fresh milk.

Recognition of overweight as a menace to health is a step toward better health. Accumulated fat is not only physically disfiguring but also shortens the life span and increases the risk of heart diseases, diabetes, and impairment of the liver and kidneys.

The final step in improved health and nutrition is up to you and your family. Are you taking advantage of the abundance of good nutrition available? Do you use iodized salt, enriched bread and flour, milk, a variety of fruits and vegetables? Are you and your family following good food habits? Now is a good time for you to evaluate your own food habits.
